BISHOP COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.
The Pentateuch and Book of Johna, critically examined,
By the Right Rev. John William Colenso, D.D.,
Bishop of Na al. London: Lengman and Co.
1862.

(From the Christian Observer.)

[CONTINED.]

10. The next point—that the Israelites were almost too many for the promised land—is a palpable error, arising from neglect and oversight. The bishop looks only to the land which the Israelites, blamably, were satisfied with possessing. But the teer tary promised to Abraham in Geo. xv. extended "from the river of Egypt, to the great river,—the river Euphrates." That they neglected to occupy this large dominion, was their sin. (See Judges ii.) But it in no way affects the original premise.

sin (See Judges ii.) But it in no way affects the original promise.

11. The next difficulty, like the last, is of the bishop's own making; it exists not in the Pentateuch recif. In Exedus xiii, it is recorded that 'the Lord said unto Mores. It shall be when the Lord shall fring thee into the land of the Canaanites; thou shalt set apart unto the Lord all that epensth the matrix. the makes shall be the Lords. Thus, for a certain time, then future, all makes that "opened the matrix" were to be set apart for the Lord's service.

But, in the second year after they had come out of Egypt, it pleased the Lord to make a new arrangement. He took the tribe of Lerd, in the place of the first-born of all Israel. This occasioned a numbering of each,—the tribe of Lerd, and the first-born,—in order that that the exchange should be made qui equitable.

But who were "the first-born" that were then to be order that that the exchange should be made qui e equitable.

But who were "the first-born" that were then to be mantered? Not the men who had been born lifty or seventy years before, but those who had been born since the giving of that law. Clearly, the enactme et, which, at its first enunciation, looked forward, could not be other wise read.

On being numbered, the first-born of all Israel proved to be 22,273. This was among a population of about two millions. With this result Bish pt Colenso quarrels, and from it he draws all kinds of about results; such as that "every mother of Israel must have had, on the average, forty-two sons!"—Results which certainly do not flow from anything said by Moses.

He tells us that, in London, the whole number of births in a year is 96,304. The population of London may be about the same as that of the whole camp of Israel. But the period in the case of Israel was not one year, but one year and a month, or two months, or more, added. If we take the whole number of births to have amounted to 110,000 or 120,000, and allow one helf to have been females, then we shall find that out of 60,000 mele-births, more than 22,000 were the first births of their monters. And hence the only practical result at which we arrive is this: that in the joy of their deliverance a large number of the young people of Israel had married. This is the only sold result of Bishop's Colenso's inquiry, and we find nothing surprising in it. As to his wonderful supposition, that "every mother in Israel must have had forty-two sons," it is simply absurd. It rests on no basis whatever. Yet he concludes this chapter with the cool remark that, "By this time, surely, great doubts must have arisen in the minds of most readers as to the historical venerity of sundry portions of the Pentateuch!"

12. But this last piece of arithmetical criticism historical veracity of sundry portions of the Pentateuch!"

12. But this last piece of arithmetical criticism introduces us to a large and substantial question, at which we rojoice. For in truth, we are getting weary of Bishop Colerso's arithmetical problems, and are glad to come, at last, to a question of some breadth and substance. At the close of the chapter on the first born, he adds, that his reader's doubts as to the veracity if the Pentateuch "will be confirmed into a certain conviction, by its appearing plainly, from the data of the Pentateuch itself, that there could not have been any such population as this, to come out of Egypt,—in other words, that the children of Israel, at the time of the Exodus, could not, if only we attend to the distinct statements of the narraive, have amounted to two millions; that, in fact, the whole body of warriors could not have be in two thousand." (p. 90.)

We say, that we rejoice to come to a plain, broad issue like this; for the Bishop's success or failure on this point, may fairly be considered as a test or token of the value of his whole book. He rests, be it observed, on "the data of the Pentateuch itself," to show that the whole story of an exodus of 600,000 men, or of an aggregate of about two millions in all, is plainly incrediale, and a mere fiction.

Three chapters are devoted to this question,—the 15th, 16th, and 17th. Of these, the 16th requires no motice, since it is devoted to a proof that the sojoum of the children of Israel is Egypt was 210 or er 215 years; with which ststement we do not quarrel. Having established this point, the Bishop next goes on to prove, in chap xvi., "that it is guide impossible that there should have been such a number of the people of Israel in Egypt at the time of the Exodus, as to have furnished 600,000 was to have furnished 600,000 was to have furnished 600,000 was cone in the prime of life, representing at least two millions of persons of all ages and sexes,—that is to say, instead of 600,000 warriors in the prime of life, t nents!"

It was this sort of way of using arithmetic which made a practical man once say in our hearing. "Oh, I never e-re for figures:"—Anything may be done with figures."

Let us observe bow B shop Colenso brings out this startling result. He begins by assuming a growth of four and a helf sons to each married pair; he then says, "Let us suppose that they increased in this way from generations (an entirely falacious supposition), and so brings out his result of 4923 males.

Now, at page 26, he had himself said,—"Benjam n, though called a "youth," was more than twenty-two years old, according to the story, at the time of Jacob's migration. It is therefore quite possible that he may have had ten sons, perhaps by several wives."

Now, we do not agree with him in this conclusion. But it is his own, and he might as well have agained upon it as upon the cases of Levi and Rouben. He might have said, as he did in their cases: "Let us suppose that they incressed in this way from generation to generation." The results would have been rather starding. If Benjamin, at twenty-two, had ten sons, those ten sons, twenty-three years after, might have had 100. In the 46th year, the aggregate would have exceeded 1000; in the 69th, 10,000; in the 22cd, 100,000; and before the 215th year had strived, they might have peopled the continent of Asis. Such is the absurdity of arguing from one, two, or half-a-dozen cases.

The escential point in the Bishop's argument is, that there were only four generations in 215 years. He makes this out by selecting three or four cues of long lived people. Levil lived to be 137; Kohata, his son, to be 133; Amman, to be 137; and Moses, at the date of the Erodus, was eighty years of age. But Goshes, generally, was not peopled with octogenarians. Why does the Bishop shut his eyes to other equally plain facts?

Joseph's two sons were born to him before the days of famine came. (Gen. xii. 50.) It was in the second year of famine came. (Gen. xii. 50.) It was in the second power for famine came. (Gen. xii.

Ephraim."

But this genealogy, since it opposes the bishop's five or six selected cases, he "dismisses, as most probably stroneous, and at all events as of no importance whatever." (p. 106.)

The sad truth is, that Bishop Colenso seems unable to see, or to recognise, any fact except such as may serve his purp see. He finds five or six cases, in which men, living long, married late in life, and had few children. In these cases, four names bridge over the whole period of 215 years. But the cases of Benjamin, with his ten sons, born (the bishop thinks) before their father was two and twenty, and of Joseph, who has a four four persons the sons about the programment of the sons about the programment of the sons about the four persons and the sons about the sons about

In Gen. xxxiv., two sons of Jacob storm and take a city, engturing all their wealth, their sheep and oxen, their wives and children, and all their spoil.

In Gen. xxxv., Jac b cause to Luz, "he and all the people that were with hin."

Bishop Colemss must, at various times, have read all there passages. He sees also, at chap, xivii, the plain words, "Joseph nourshed his father and his brethren, and all his father's household," and yet, because in chsp. xivi, the names of only Jacob's own descendants are preserved, he casts into non-existence "all the household," and believes that Jacob and his sone came down in o Egypt like a family of gipsies, each man with his ass, and with his children in the paniers. Verily, there are no bounds to the credulty of a sceptic!

But, to return to the question, What would be a rational and consistent view of the numbers of Jacob's family and household when he went down to Egypt? We believe the following to be a low cathwate:

intagonies. He opens the mouth of a valeano, and buries the popularies of a city in torrents of burning lava. Diseases, in infinite forms, in endless varie y of anguish, are sacking and terturing myriads of human beings in all ages and countries; apparently without any reference to the moral worth or surpfunde of those who suffer. All such phenomena in the works and ways of God sre, to all appearance, no less opposed to our conceptions of squiry and goodness, than the so-called 'difficulties of Scripture."

If Dr. Colenso had taken the obvious course of becoming a theologian before he would have weighed and pendered the innumerable process which surround us on every side, of the benevolence of the Great Creator. He would then the tried to estimate the wordrous fact that "God SO loved the world, that He gave His enly-begaten Sor, to the end that men should not periah, but have everlasting life." Against these he night have placed the 'aforesaid "difficulties," whether those connected with the overthrow of Sodom and Gomerrab, the temptation of Abraham, the destruction of the Caramius, and the long enduring punishment of Israel; or those which Mr. Rogers has pointed out, as existing in the ordinary government of the world. And unless he had differed from all other moral philosophers deserving the name, he would have seen and admitted that the proofs of God's leve are irrefrigable and overwhelming; while the face's which we merety cannot understand, are not in any degree comparable with the affirmative proofs. The fly perched upon the dome of St. Paul's, and typing to make out the architect's design, is only a faint resemblance of a human being, striving to grasp, to understand, and to pass sentence upon, the justice and benevolence of God's government of the Universe. Surely we overlook, or neglect too much, the plain lessons of the book of Job. That most ancient and wonderfall a only we rot kanded down to us merely to pretuate the vain efforts of Jeb and his three friends "to find out God". It is told us in the p

THE INTERCOLONIAL CRICKET MATCH.

THE Melbourne Herald of the 19th instant says:—Yesterday afternoon there was a crewded meeting held at Marshill's botal, Swanston-street, for the purpose of giving a welcome to the Victorian Eleven on their retura from Sychey, and size to consider a proposition to challenge the New South Wales Bleven to a match on the Meibeurne ground during the coming month. Mr. J. Judd was called on to preside. Mr. T. W. Wills, as captain of the eleven, on being celled upon made a statement of the facts which had led to the misunderstanding on the cricket ground, and also as to the measures which had setuated the Victorian players in taking the course which thay adopted. He expressed his own opinion that Mr. Jones was fairly out, and they only proceeded with the game because the majority of the players were in faveur of playing. He believed that a missprehension existed as to the terms, and that the opinion generally held was, that one condition should be that Mr. Jones should not go in again, and when he was allowed to take his station at the wickets it was not to resume his innings, but he was allowed to go in again for a fresh innings. Saveral members of the Bleven were then called upon to express their opinions. Mr. Hope said that the wicket was down before the over was coalled. Redfern and Marshall inderstoed that Mr. Jones was not to go in again. Mr. Wardill said that Mr. Driver called the over so soon as the bill reached Marshall's hands, and stated that Conway had mentioned on the ground that the over so soon as the bill reached Marshall's hands, and stated that Conway had mentioned on the ground that the over so soon as the bill reached Marshall's hands, and stated that Conway had mentioned on the ground that the over a soon as the bill reached Marshall's hands, and stated that Conway had mentioned the names of Wills and Conway. On the guestion of playing the eleven were divided, and their few yilled the wicket was put down, and he mentioned the names of Wills and Conway. On the gues amouncement was received with great applause, and the motion was carried by sociamation.

The following letter has been addressed to the editor of the Melbourne Heraid:

"Sir,— In my letter to the editor of the Sydney Morning Heraid: I onsited two insportant points to which the New South Waise men seem to attach much importance. The first is that they say that Conway stated that the heard the unspire call 'over.' He admitted thus much, that he did hear 'over' called, but having his back to Jones' wicket, he could not tell whether the wicket had been put down or not prior to his having heard 'over' called. Those who know Mr. Conway are well aware that when he has bowled his four balls, he in all cases secoms to be in a hurry to get to his mext 'over', but that does not follow that' over' had been or was called. Secondly, Mr. Driver stated at the meeting of the association called on the night that it was determined that we should continue the centest, he there stated in my presence, and in the presence of Mesra Redfern and Conway, that he 'eaw Marshall take the ball and shake it in his usual style, and waiting for his man to leave his ground, and that then he called over. This, as every cricketer knows, is contrary to all the laws of cricket.

TUESDAY, FRBRUARY 24, 1863.

THE letter of Sir W. BURTON will be read with interest by those who remember the great service he performed in his judicial capacity. In the celebrated speech he delivered in 1835, which was the subject of so much discussion and inquiry both in England and in the colonies, perhaps a more awful picture was never drawn, or a more serious impeachment pronounced against a people. Judge Burrow asserted that the whole community seemed engaged in the punishment or commission of crimes. Crimes, including 442 capital convictions in three years, including 442 capital convictions in three years, —crimes of violence, murders, manslaughters in drunken revels, deliberate perjuries from metives of revenge or reward,—were brought to light. The convict stations he compared to "bee hives," diligently pouring in and out, but with this difference,—"the one worked by day, the other by hight; the one went forth to his industry—the other to plunder." These evils he traced to "squatting;" the congregation of prisoner sertotal neglect of superintendence by employers

"squatting;" the congregation of prisoner ser-vants in Sydney; the license of improper persons to public houses; and, more than all, the of convicts who, aimed for marauding expedi-tions, sometimes left their masters premises by night, and even by day. He concluded by de-claring his love to free institutions,—the pride and boast of England; but which if conferred on such a populace would, he believed, end in the corruption of all. Such was the judicial declaration of Judge BURTON, made in the presence of the people to whom it refers. It could not be disregarded, and enquiry only shewed that however deep the colouring might be, it nevertheless fell short of the actual truth, because there was underlying the outer moral condition an inner corruption still mor-terrible.

Sir W. Burron's letter to the Times refere to a state of things in similar language.

"The colony at the time I refer to had outgrown in its free population its fitness as a place of penalities."

"The colony at the time I refer to had ou grown in its free population its fitness as a place of penal punishment.

"The cenvict class reckoning as such men and women still under sentence, holders of tickets of-leave, and trose free by expiration of sentence—had come to be a powerful party in the colony, to occupy poses of trust in situations which esabled them to give information to their friends, to the hindrance of justice, in the escape of felons; and once, I sm able to state from my own judicial knowledge, a berbarous murder was committed upon a presumed witness in consequence of such information being canveyed by a convict clerk to the party against whom a prosecution was about to be instituted. They had their especial organ in the public press, conducted by a convict, ho der of a ticket of leave; they were the chief holders of the two numerous low public-houses to which the friends of prisoners awaiting their trials and the witnesses on both sides recorted, and frequenty those publicans, and others also who had been convicts themselves, formed as part of the jury.

"It is not too much to say that the course of justice was often hindered by these causes; but, besides all this, there was, on the one hand, an often undue and undeserved indulgence granted to special convicts on account of some talent useful to the favoured individual soliciting it; and, on the other, a spirit of insubordination among all classes of convict servants, and a consequent severity on the part of masters and magistrates, greatly deplored but not to be avoided with a due regard to discipline.

"The women, the most depraved and abandoned of their sex, disreminated evils the most disastrous in social life,—as a class, the worst, the most duscontrallable, and unreclaimed,—circulated throughout the colony from month to mosth, and at last crowded together in a prison of their own to the number of 800 and upwards at one time, of whom no sansible person would receive one into his house."

Considering such a description, it is somewhat surp

Considering such a description, it is somewhat surprising to find Judge Burrow recommending the revival of transportation, because, howeve the revival of transportation, because, however advantageous it may be to Great Britain, it is impossible that it can be renewed with success, unless upon a scale which would ensure all the evils described by the learned Judge. If we turn to transportation as it was, we find that large grants of land were given to capitalists. Labour was assigned to them with promises of bounty for the acceptance of convict service. This labour was unremunerated save by food and labour was unremunerated save by food and clothing—regulated in amount and quality. Men assigned continued through the term of their service, and could not escape from the employment of a particular master by their own choice. It was fer a long time an inflexible rule of Government that even those withdrawn by prosecution from the service of a master, at the conclusion of a sentence should return to his charge. In a small population each man was known. The constables were necessarily men of their own class, and discipline was preserved by the most stringent rules and cruel punishments. Any one who thinks proper to go fully into the subject has only to refer to the Parliamentary blue-books of 1837, and the accounts of penal administration as conveyed in official documents. The diurnal floggings at the Hyde Park Barracks would awaken horror in the mere recitation. The magistrates had complained that the flogging was not inflicted with sufficient severity. A regulation cat was therefore issued, and a description occupying a long space was given of the effect produced.

poper understane of finders. There are memorical against the account each of the control of the which though not absolutely untrue, is never-heless calculated to mislead, namely, that criminals who commit acts of violence, such as burglery, garotting and so forth, were the most desired convicts by masters. It is surely absurd to attribute a peculiar virtue to men of this class. We have heard it spoken of in times past as a matter of boast that a London pickpocket would make a first-rate ploughman. All such statements are absurd. No doubt a man of great sharpness in his profession as a pick-pocket would be clever in other employments if he could be got to pursue them ; or a muscula he could be got to pursue them; or a muscular resolute daring spirit if put in charge of a bullock dray would show a good deal of pluck and management as well as commonly a great deal of ferocity and cruelty. The reason why men guilty of crimes of violence were preferred by masters, was that their sentences were often for life, and this involved a servitude of many years. They either were incorrigible, and got to chain-gangs and penal settlements, or they succumbed to their fate and became expert and useful in their employments, and from the long habit of intercourse they often obtained and deserved a considerable degree of good will. But it is obvious that no Government contemplates the revival of a system like this. The men of long sentences in former times were such as under the present system would rarely suffer balf that

Among the great difficulties in the way of the Among the great dimediate in the way of the formation of a penal colony is the inertiable inequality of the sexes. Much was said about the removal of this evil when Western Australia was made a penal colony; but what has turned out to be the fact?—that there are 9000 males, and 5000 females. In the youthful population there would, no doubt, be an equality of the sexes, but amongst the adults the difference is enormous. In short, it is a difference which it is impossible to overcome. At the same time that there were 800 come. At the same time that there were 800 women in one factory in this colony, there was an inequality of the sexes almost as great outside—for, to the credit of English women they are not disposed to leave their home upon speculation of being married to convicts, and it is wild and absurd to expect that they will do so. But this very circumstance shews the impossibility of forming a panal colony but at the possibility of forming a penal colony, but at the sacrifice of all those principles which ought to govern the construction of communities.

It may be the duty of this colony to enter a vigorous protest against the removal of any such system within reach of the Australias. It is very probable that a new effort will be made by the Home Government to form a penal settlement, and that this will be recommended by the Commission issued to enquire into the peration of the present system. not deceive ourselves; transportation within reach of our communities means the multiplication of vice, of crime, of pauperism, of gaol and prison expenses—of degrading punish-ments, and frequent executions.

I'RE COURT MINSTERIA.—The company of Ethiopian preformers, known as the Court Minstersia, made their debut in Sydney, last night, at the Lycoum Theatre. The reports of their successful career in Violoria had preceded their services and they were welcomed on their opening right with a full house, every part of the theatre being crowded. The Court Minstersia, who were seven in number, beddes accordonanyista, appeared in the first part in full Court costume of the time of George II.—Bonne (Lealis) and Tambourise (Cowan) having the distinguishing shirt cellar and necktic characteristic of the Ethiopian school. In both the instrumental and the vocal performance much skill was displayed, the minsteries having good, and well-trained voice. The joken and other pleasantries with which these seags were diversified, were well received; that humourous effect being due almost estirely to the antice and grimaces with which they were brought out. The pieces most admired were the songs "On gausty breaths the tender sigh," which was beautifully oung by Mr. Percival, and the sole and quartotic "Come where my Love lies dreaming." Both of these elicited prolonged applanae, but, according to a very judicious arrangement, no encores were given. The second part of the stocratament commenced with a buriseque medley dance by W. Roboos. In the counic Ethiopian buriseque which followed, Leslay's extravedinary miniery and droll contextians drew shouts of laughter from the audience. Equally happy was Johnny Cowae, in his representation of the nigger giving the manager a specimen of his own asting, and of that of the Durchman and the American. MADARI GRIO, THE BRADDED LADY.—A large number of persons yeaterday visited the rooms in Pitte-street where Madame Ghio, the Hearded Ledy, and her son Reea, are now being exhibited. We are disposed to think that many whose curiosity was accused by the announcement of such a noveley—for novelry it certainly is in the colony, although bearded laddies have more than sence been exhibited in the mother country—wave not so much struck as they imagined they would be on ceeing an hirestic appendage to the countenance of one of the fair set. Some who were inclined to suspect deception must on looking at Madame Ghio have felt—repetially those whe accepted the invitation to tent the resility by an application of their digits to the flashonably grown beard and whiskers—that slithough nature had to considerable extent infringed her own laws, she had not produced anything very outer after all. Although Madame has a decidedly feminine expression in her physignemy, there is no sent delicacy in her features as to make its addition of beard and whiskers appear isomersons or unseemaly. She is stated to have been twice married, the youth characteristically named Reau, now apparently about the years of age, being the offspring of her first union. The boy presents nothing like precotionally developed manilinese, indeed he is rather undergrown, and has a gruine air of juventility about his action and manner. The hair upon his face is dark in hus to make its action for the results of the first husband (Clofullia) has united her fortines with three of an Americo-Italian, whose name as now heart. FATAL GUN ACCIDENT AT CAMDEN.—On Sunday morning about seven o'clock this town was thrown into a state of e. diement through the report of the death of Mr. John M'Mahon's youngest son. It appears that his nephew, a boy about twelve years of age, had loaded a gun with the intention of shooting birds off the grape vince. Just as the gun was ready, the little boy oame out of the bedroom to see what was going on, and the naphew, when in the set of putting down the trigger, his flager slipped, and the whole contents of the gun went into the pow child's had. Dr Bleake was immediately sent for, but, alse! too late, as life was entinct a few minutes after the accident. An inquest will be held on the body to-day.—Communicated.

BUILIDE—An inquest was held by the City Corone, at his office yesterday, on the body of a man named Robert Owen, aged 5fty-one years. It appeared from the evidence that the deceased, who was a manufecture and vendor of sweetmeats, sustained an injury to his head some five months ago, through the heat of the sun, and had not been thortcughly well since. Latterly he got much worse, and on leat Friday week his wife took him to Norm, who told him he was suffering from congestion of the brain, and prescribed for him. On Saturday morning application was made for his admission into the Indiranzy, and he was informed that he would be admitted on the fullowing morning he sent his wife to a butcher's for some mest, and while she was in the act of leaving to go he in flicted a deep wound in his throat with a rastor. A medical man was at once called in, and the wretched man was removed to the Infirmary, where he died on Saturday least. Dr. M.Kay, who attended him in that establishment, stated that the insmediate cause of death was congestion of the lungs, caused by the threat admitting the cold air. The jury returned the following worder:

"We find that the deceased. Robert Owen, died from the state of his mind at the time he committed the act." The widow of the deceased man being very peor, the cor nare and jury subscribed a small sum to supply the immediate wants of herself and children.

A SPIRITED CHARL—The Marsenge correspondent of the Fass Courier, writing to that paper on the 10th instant, esys:—Last 1 hursday, as Captain Battya, at the head of a small detachment of police, was approaching the residence of a notorious settler and ex-publican in the Weddin Mountains, the proprietor was seen outside, and heard to shoul loudy, when almost immediately three apparently splendidly mounted men duched at a great pace into and across the ranges. The officer and his men instantly took the initiative, and new commenced an exciting chase, which must have best for hunting hellew; and, after it had continued about five miles, the broopers' weighty accountrements, in conjunction with their previous two days' heavy week, began to tell upon their horses, and so, one by one, they dropped behind, until the gallant captain was to be seen leading the van selus. After two or three more miles of ground were passed, a thick oversh was observed a short distance a-head, when the officer, evidently weight, began to tell upon their horses, and so, one by one, they dropped behind, until the gallant captain was to be seen leading the van selus. After two or three more miles of ground were passed, a thick oversh was observed a short distance a-head, when the officer, evidently weight of the chambers in rapid succession. But every discharge acreed of on account accept the last, for, simultanously with the final shot, the most rearward horsensas was seen to give a sext of galvanto jerk, re-ic once or twice in his saddle, and then disappear with his matter in such a thick held of cerub as to render all further pursuit hopelas. THE WRECK OF THE ORPHEUS.

The busy marts of Sydney
Look gloomily to-day;
A cloud seems brooding on the shore
A shedow o'er the bay;

And ev'ry brow is darken'd And pale is ev'ry cheek As shudd'ring hearers catch the words Of those who dread to speak.

They tell of ripen'd manhood, Of youth in early bloom Of pious zeal, and valour's fire O'erwhelm'd by sudden dooms.

Behind it spreads her haven; The master, chart in hand Thro' channels mark'd in other years, Heads inward for the land.

But wee betide the false chart That told its tale amiss, And made the truth of other days The mocking lie of this!

And wee betide the false breeze, That blew se fresh and light, Yet urged the long green billows on Before its voice of might—

And wee betide the false sea

One shock-as when the earthquake Upheaves a groaning land— Her stern bangs wav'ring in the surge Her bows are deep in sand.

Back—back the lab'ring engines ! The huge steam-giants fail To move her 'gainst the mighty swell I hat rolls before the gale.

Aiss! the gallant Orpheus!
She lies a prestrate wreck:
The surges climb her lofty side
And thund'ring sweep the dock.

But not a British seaman In that dread moment quail'd, Nor waver'd ancient discipline, Nor duty's impulse fail'd. Each took his post of danger

The launch has fill'd and founder'd With all her noble crew— Hurrah! for those two happier barks That yet shall save their fex. Away they speed for succour; Hope gleams, but Fate is nigh; The few go forth to toil in vain, The many wait—to die.

The weary hours crept opward
The waves broke fierce and fast;
And fainter waxed the hands, that clung
By slipp'ry shroud or mast.

Yet ere the good ship parted A ringing, pealing cry, The voice of souls that knew not fear Went up from see to sky.

A shout, as when our formen Disheartened in the fray Before the shock of British steel Recoil and shrink away.

Then spoke the gallant Burnett-No meaner voice was heard-

And he who heard and tolls it, In fancy long shall bear Dim cohose of that proud farewell, That thrice-repeated cheer.

Then came an awful silence, A hush as of the grave, Save one deep tone - the ocean's mean, Above the dying brave.

Without one shriek or murmur, As men who "fall on aleep," They gave their spirits up to God, Their bodies to the deep.

In furious onset close, When man to man and foot to foot They mingle with their foes,

When rolls the deal'ning volley And war-cloude dim the air

And friends are nigh, to cheer us, And fore to taunt our flight— He scarce were man, who shrank from Death Anid the press of fight.

But when the King of Terrors

But Time shall bring to anguish A sure the' slow relief, And mellow into soft regrets The bitter wine of grief, Then many a British mourner With tearful pride shall tell

The heroes of the Orphous Shall have their meed of fame, Wherever floats the British flag, Or sounds the British name.

Who own'd as selfish murmur, Who drew no coward breath; To Honor, Faith, and Duty true, Tho' "face to face with Death."

VOLUNTEEU KNCAMPMENT.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Fig.—I am glad to find there is some talk of an encompment at Raster. It is the best, and in fact the only tune that it can be carried out, and fortunately neither the arrival ner departure of the English math will interfers to prevent the attendance of the large number who desire to go into camp quarters. The Volunteers have now been in existence nearly two years and a-half, and during that period their comrades of Victoria have been four times encamped, and it is generally thought there to be a good means of "breaking thour in" is the rough side of the duties of a coldier, and hirlyl popular with the Volunteer, It may be premature to allude to the choice of ground, but if the encampent should be decided on, the place selected ought to be configuous to the line of railway, with plenty of water—this, however, is a matter for the Guessanding Officer and the Medical Officer of the cure to decide upon. It is to be hoped that another Rester will not be allowed to pass without the Volunteers having a taste of camp line.

I runsin, bit, your obedient servant,

Palmer-street, February 23.

MONDAY.

SITTINGS FOR THE TRIAL OF GAUSSE.

JURY COURT.

BEFORE Mr. Justice Wise, and a jury of four.

KORNHARDT V. O'SULLIVAN AND ANOTHER.
The trial of this case, which commenced on Friday, was resumed, and lasted the whole day, without being concluded.

BANCO COURT.

Before Mr. Justice Milford, and a jury of four.

ABRAHAMS V. FORIUM.

This was an action for goods sold and delivered, to which the defendant had pleaded payment.

Mr. Jeanes appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Windeyer for the defendant.

The amount involved in this suit was 630 10.

for the defendant.

The amount involved in this suff was £39 10s. 11d. The amount involved in this suff was £39 10s. 11d. The plaintiff, a hawker, claimed this sum for various goods sold to defendant, a resident in the Gundarco district. The payment relied upon had been made to one Anno Steenbohm, alleged to have been a pariner with plaintiff. The question really at issue was whether or not Steenbohm had been Abrahams partner in this matter.

The trial of this case did not terminate.

Alexander Fordyce, John Bow, John Maguire, and Heary Manns, were indicated for that they, on the 15th June, 1862, at Eugowra, did assault and rob James Condell, Henry Meran, William Haviland, and John Frgun, and steal 2719 ounces of gold, £3700 in noise, and various minor articles; and that immediately before the said robbery they did feloniously wound James Condell. Two other counts, charging the wounding as being at the time of and after the robbery, were given up by the Crown. Prisoners had pleaded not guilty on a former day. The Atterney-General, with Mr. Butler, conducted the prosecution.

The Atterney-General, with Mr. Butler, conducted the proceeding.

Mr. B. Forster, attorney for the prisoners, stated fithat he had caly just been placed in possession of the means of retaining counsel for the defence, and applied to the Court for the postponement of half-an-hour, in order to enable him to secure the service of counsel.

His Honor would have no objection to give half-an-hour, or even an hour, on the understanding that then prisoners would be prepared to go on with the trial.

Mr. Forster knew nothing of the case beyond what he had seen in the papers of the day, and, therefore, could not say what course he should take after consultation with counsel.

may what course he should take after consultation with counsel.

His Honor could hardly consent to a postponement, unless he was assured that it was for the bons fide purpose of going on with the trial. If the attorney could not answer as to the course he would take, he should not answer as to the course he would take he he should ask the princares individually if they were prepared to take their trial, and if not, he would wish them to state their reason. Then, addressing Fordyon, his Honor said—"are you prepared to take your trial, if you get counsel?" Fordyoe No, I am not.

His Honor: On what ground?

Fordyoe On the want of counsel.

His Honor: I shall not object to delay the trial for half-sn-bour, or even for an hour, in order that you may obtain counsel. Then if you get his assistance will you be prepared to go on?—Have you any other ground?

Fordyce: No.

His Honor: Prisoner Bow, are you prepared to go on with your trial?

Fordyce: No.

His Honor: Prisoner Bow, are you prepared to go on with your trial?

Bow When I get counse!

His Honor: Maguire, are you prepared?

Maguire: Yes, if I have counse!

His Honor: Maguire, are you prepared?

Maguire: Yes, if I have counse!

His Honor: Manna, you were the person who, some time back, applied to have your trial postponed on account of the absence of your witnesses. You have now had a fortnight to procure them, are you now prepared to stand your trial?

Manna: Yes, if I get counse!

His Honor: Then I shall adjourn the Court for one hour. I may here mention that there has been a great deal of apprehension on the public mind with regard to the good fever, from which one or two persons have died, and that, at my suggestion, the Government have appointed a Board to sit and enquire into the subject. The Board (consisting of Drs. O'Brien, Nathan, and West) have enquired and reported on the subject. The report has been sent to me, and from it, it appears that the disease has now almost disappeared, and that there is now no new case in the gaol. The medical genulment are further distinctly of opinion that, notwithstanding the great crowding of the Court during the trial, and the bringing the prisoners backward and forward from the gold to the Court, no danger whatever is to be apprehended.

The Court then adjourned for an hour, and, on its reaseembling,

Mr. Forster informed the Court that he had retained Mr.

TURSDAY, 24th March,
That magnificent sheep and cattle property, known as THE GOBBAGOM LIN AND TOOYAL RUNS, situate in the Lachlan district, and on the MURRUMBIDGER RIVER.
GOBBAGOM LIN RUN, until recently worked by theelt, has about 9 MILES BIVER FRONTAGE, by a depth of 12 miles, and is intersected by Houligan's Creek.
It is joined on the north by the MARAH run, belonging to Messra. Rankin, Brothers, and on the east by Tooyal, with which latter run it is now incorperated.
The COUNTRY consists of extensive high flats along the river frontage, with fine undusting ridges at the back, very lightly timbered with b.z., including long sloping sweeps and several large plains, such as THE OUEAN, FRUSTECT, and LONG PLAINS.
ALL SPLENDID FATTENING COUNTRY.
Its graving qualities are best testified to by the fact that some of the finest sheep and cattle ever rent to market from the Murrumbidges have been off this run, and it will fatient steck at any season of the year.
The TOOYAL RUN adjoins Gobbagomlin, and has about 9 miles frontage also to the Murrumbidges River, with a depth of about 10 miles, being of a similar character, the back country throughout as good as any in the colony, and its proved carrying capabilities really astonishing. It is well watered back from the river by lagoons, and still further back by means of dams and wells; and its

W. BOWDEN is instructed by the Except of the late F. J. King, Eq., to sell by suction, at the Land Sale Rooms, 154 Pitt-street, on THURSDAY, the 5th of March, at 11 o'clock.

A very large stone-built family house, on the south side of King-street, near to Sowez-street, having a frontage to King-street of 39 feet.

The house is three stories high, was built of stone, in a substantial manner, by the late Mr. King, for his own residence, and contains a hall, eight rooms, and large collars. The yard is enclosed, and has a side entrance from Kingstreet; water laid on. The rooms are large and lofty, and some of them fitted with codar cuplorards.

The situation is elevated and dry.

At the same time will be sold on the same account and risk.

At the same time will be soid on the same account and risk,

A stone-built store and warehouse, fronting King-street, separated from the dwolling-house above mentioned, by the cart entrance to large stores at the rear leading from King-street.

This property was built expressly as a business place, without reference to residence, but it is now intended to give the purchaser the opportunity of buying at a price to be named before the sale, a portion of the iand at the back, as a yard for the convenience of persons who might wish to make a abop and residence of the precaless, but the purchaser will not be bound to take the piece of land unless he wishes it.

Title satisfactory, with very liberal terms.

A Butcher's Shop and Residence.

For Positive Sale.

Two. BOWDEN is instructed to sell by a suction, at the Land Sale Rooms, 154, Pittstreet, on THURSDAY, the 5th of March, at 11 o'clock, A stone-built bouse on the senth side of King-street, next door to the Lord Nelson public-house, and now occupied by Mr William Walpole as a butcher's shop, doing a good trade in the immediate neighbourhood, sided considerably by the many coasting vessels constantly lying at the Commercial and other vessels constantly lying at the Commercial and other thanks, a few rods further down the street.

The house contains four rooms besides the abop, with litchen detached, yard enclosed by a stone wall, and water laid on.

This is a very compact property, always tenanted, and in a part of the city daily rising into importance from its contiguity to the numerous wharfs at which the steamers and coasting vessels land their cargoes of grain, hay, butter, and other produce collected at the many harbours and ports along the coast.

Terms at asle.

Pitt-street, on THURSDAY, the 5th March, at II o'clock.

Lot i.—A large store, erected of stone and brick, containing two floors, the dimensions being 62 feet on the north and south sides, 25 feet on the seast, and 32 feet on the western front. The walls to the first floor are of stone, above that of brickwork. The roof is slated. The approach to this store is from King-street a little eastward of Susser, street. It is now in the occupation of Mr. Rowling, flour and grain factor

Lot 2 — A very large warehouse, opposite Lot 1, containing two floors, with room in the beasement story for an immense quantity of goods. The building is of stone, I10 feet long by 33 feet. Immediate passession could be obtained. The en rance is very easy from King-street, and is used in common with Lot 1.

W. BOWDEN is favoured with instructions to sell by auction, at the Land Sale Rooms, 164, Pitt-street, on THURSDAY, the 5th March, at 11 o'clock.

The spacious and substantial two-storied house known as Garnarville Day and Boarding School for Young Ladies, attested at Paddington, on the road to Waverley, only five minutes' walk to Saint Matthiat' Church and the committee stand, in a large and respectable neighbourhood, about one mile from the Teach and the committee stand, in a large and respectable neighbourhood, about one mile from the Research contains four good-sized rooms on the ground floor, basides a spacious hall and a stairouse leading to the first-floor, on which are five bedrooms and a passage. From the windows in front, the extensive waters of Botany Bay and the numerous houses and establishments around it, as well as a large portion of Newtown, extending beyond 8t. Peter's Church, are plainly seen, and give great variety to the pleasing scene. This view is not likely to be obstructed, as it extends over the large tract of land known as the water reserve, immediately in front of the house.

The views from the back of the premises are also very pleasing and cheerful, embracing portions of the harbour from Darling Point to Many beach, on the north-east of the lightable, towards Middle Harbour.

The rooms are of good dimensions and lofty; several of them have register grates.

The frontage to the main road is 60 feet, and depth 99 feet; well of good water in the yeard.

Property in this locality is rapidly improving in value, and must continue to do so, owing to the increasing desire of persons with families to remove from the crowded city into the healthy and exhilirating suburbs, of which this is unquestionably the best, being easily accessible, free from dust, and many other annoyances to be mot with in the way in and out of the city by the southern side.

G. YEOMANS has received instructions from the Executors of the estate of the late Peter Brodie, Esq., Murrurundi, to sell by auction, at the Northumberland Hotel, West Maitland, on THURSDAY, the 5th day of March, 1863, at 12 o'clock,

All that splendid pastoral property, known as "Swamp Oak and Mulla Creeks, extending along each for a datance of about 30 miles. These creeks, with their branches, contribute a never-failing supply of pure water in all seasons, and estimated to carry 35,000 sheep in any season. The country is counposed of fine open sound ridges, abounding with rich grasses, and the run well known to be one of the most sound, healthy stations throughout the Northern district; in fact, the sheep on this station were never yet known to be diseased, which of itself speaks volumes for the soundness of the country.
The improvements on the head station consist of a confortable 4-room cottage, kitchen, store, men's huta, wooished, and yards, together with drafting yards, stockyard, cultivation and grass paddocks: and at the out sheep stations there are men's huts, with either American or split yands, for sheep, &c.

The Cattle Station is situated on Cabon Creek, which is a tributary of Swamp Oak, and on which are erected two comfortable huts, together with mustering and drafting yards for working the cattle.

With this splendid pastoral station will be sold the following stock, namely—16 000 sheep, more or less.
The working bullochs, cart horses, drays, and gear, together with stores; implements, &c., &c., to be taken at valuation.

The character of the sheep are undeniably good, and are principally reared from the celebrated flocks of the Peel tiver Land and Mineral Company, and Andrew Loder, Baq., of Celip Creek, Liverpool Plains, whose flocks stand fattening qualities, combining caroase.

The coate, numbering about 1600, are a fair well-bred average hord, which will be mustered, and sounfortable home accured, wit
